

NTSE STAGE II
LANGUAGE (ENGLISH)
Held on: May 14, 2017

Directions (1 – 5): Read the following passage and answer the questions based on it. Choose the most appropriate answer.

It is taken for granted by the advocates of oriental learning that no native of this country can possibly attain more than a mere smattering of English. They do not attempt to prove this. But they perpetually insinuate it. They designate the education which their opponents recommend as a mere spelling-book education. They assume it as undeniable that the question is between a profound knowledge of Indian and Arabic literature and science on the one side, and superficial knowledge of the rudiments of English on the other. This is not merely an assumption, but an assumption contrary to all reason and experience. We know that foreigners of all nations do learn our language sufficiently to have access to all the most abstruse knowledge which it contains sufficiently to relish even the more delicate graces of our most idiomatic writers. There are, in this very town, natives who are quite competent to discuss political or scientific questions with fluency and precision in the English language. I have heard the very question on which I am now writing discussed by native gentlemen with a liberality and an intelligence which would do credit to any member of the Committee of Public Instruction. Indeed it is unusual to find, even in the literary circles of the Continent, any foreigner who can express herself/himself in English with so much facility and correctness as we find in many Indians. Nobody, I suppose, will contend that English is so difficult to an Indian as Greek to an Englishman. Yet an intelligent English youth, in a much smaller number of years than our unfortunate pupils pass at the Sanskrit College, becomes able to read, to enjoy, and even to imitate not unhappily the compositions of the best Greek authors. Less than half the time which enables an English youth to read Herodotus and Sophocles ought to enable an Indian to read Hume and Milton.

1. The writer feels that the advocates of oriental learning are
 - (A) cautiously open to the idea of English education
 - (B) aware of the tyranny of English education
 - (C) irrational in their views about English education
 - (D) aware of the politics of English education
2. Which of the following ideas does the writer have a problem with?
 - (A) Some natives are proficient in discussing complex topics
 - (B) Knowledge of English is pitched against that of Indian and Arabic literature
 - (C) Foreigners can read and enjoy some of the difficult English writings
 - (D) Learning English for an Indian can be easier than learning Greek for an Englishman.
3. The foreigner discussed in the passage is
 - (A) an Arab
 - (B) a Greek
 - (C) an Indian
 - (D) an Englishman
4. Which of the following sentences best captures the main argument of the writer?
 - (A) Many Indians are capable of using English like any Englishman
 - (B) Learning English is as difficult as learning any other foreign language
 - (C) The importance of English education needs to be recognized by the supporters of oriental learning
 - (D) An Indian can learn English in half the time taken by an Englishman to learn Greek
5. According to the author, it is easier for
 - (A) Indians to have a profound knowledge of Arabic literature and science than learn English
 - (B) Indians to learn Sanskrit than for Englishman to appreciate Greek literature
 - (C) foreigners to learn Indian language than for Indians to learn foreign languages

- (D) Indians to appreciate English literature than for Englishmen to appreciate Greek literature

Directions (6 – 10): Everyday new careers and professional opportunities emerge. No matter how much each career option excites you, will have to prioritize and choose the best option for yourself. Your personality, interests, abilities, aspirations, strengths and weaknesses will help you to decide the most viable option for you. The following exercises are important for career planning, and following these will ensure that you are on the right track.

Self-assessment: The entire process of career planning should be ideally done in conjunction with your career counselor, so that you have professional help at every step. A trained career counselor can help you identify a variety of professions in which you can excel. Remember to keep your list of possible professions long, so that your confidence in yourself does not wane.

When I took my test, the long list of professions included being a florist, teacher, counselor, doctor and sales executive. The very idea that I have an aptitude for several professions – and not just to be a doctor – was very comforting. I thought to myself, “When patients get tired of me I can always be a salesman!” Do not let anyone ever tell you that you are good for nothing. Each one of us has several talents, and it is important to first identify them, and then work hard to develop them.

Self-analysis: Another important aspect of self-assessment is self-analysis or soul searching. We are the best judge of our abilities, strengths and weaknesses. If you concentrate and decide to be honest with yourself, self-analysis can help you understand your career options better.

Need for planning: If you ask adults around you whether they actually became what they had wanted to become when they were young, chances are that very few of them actually became what they had aspired towards in childhood. This may not essentially be a reflection of their failure – but an indication of change. Circumstances change, ideas change, and so do people. By the time you grow up, you may end up working in professions that neither you nor your parents know about today. Of course some of you may get to work in traditional professions and move along a well-planned path. Whatever the consequence of your planning, the truth about making a plan is that it may not work. But in the words of Henry C. Link, if “you do make a plan, the chances of getting what you want significantly increase.”

But one thing is quite certain: only those of you who work hard at your studies, acquire new skills as you move along in life, involve yourself in cultural/sports activities and attempt to plan your life will be successful.

6. Career planning is an activity that requires
- (A) analyzing one’s personality, interests, abilities, aspirations, strengths and weaknesses
 - (B) working hard at your studies, acquiring new skills as you move along in life and involving yourself in culture/sports activities
 - (C) following three important steps in consultation with one’s career counselor, and making a plan that may work.
 - (D) understanding and being aware of the fact that whatever the consequences of one’s planning the truth about asking a plan is that it may not work
7. This passage may be summarized as
- (A) ‘In career planning, it is important to involve oneself in cultural/sports activities as much as working hard or acquiring new skills.’
 - (B) ‘Before making a career choice, one should learn to prioritize career options and use one’s personality, interests, abilities, aspirations, strengths and weaknesses to plan and decide the most viable option.’
 - (C) ‘In choosing a career, it is important not to allow anyone to tell us that we are good for nothing, because our personality, interests, abilities, aspirations, strengths and weaknesses will help us decide the most viable career options for ourselves.’
 - (D) ‘A good career choice results when you follow traditional professions and move along a well-planned path.’

8. Self—analysis is considered an important part of self-assessment because
- (A) soul searching helps us to judge our abilities, honestly and helps us understand our career options better.
 - (B) we are the best judge of our abilities, strengths and weaknesses and self-analysis will enable others to analyze our abilities accurately.
 - (C) by the time we grow up, we may end up working in professions that neither we nor our parents know about today.
 - (D) each one of us has career options, and it is important to first identify them, and then work hard to attain them.
9. A trained career counselor can help us
- (A) do self-analysis, so that we are honest with ourselves.
 - (B) decide whether to be a florist, teacher, counselor, doctor or sales executive, so that we can be a salesman if we cannot be a doctor.
 - (C) identify our talents, because each one of us has several talents, and it is important to first identify them, and then work hard to develop them.
 - (D) identify different professions that will help us use our abilities, because a trained professional can help us prioritize and choose the option that is most viable for us.
10. An important point highlighted in the passage is that
- (A) only a trained counselor can help you make the right career choice
 - (B) it is our abilities, strengths and weaknesses that help us succeed in our career.
 - (C) there is not much use of making a plan – very few people get their plans fulfilled.
 - (D) many people do not get to pursue the career of their choice because circumstances, ideas and people change.

Directions (11 – 15): If the fact of the fire did not immediately penetrate my consciousness, the heat of the blast did and soon propelled me from my seat. All around me, there was a confusion of upended tables, overturned chairs, bodies pitched toward the door of the dining room, and the sounds of broken glass and crockery. Fortunately, the windows toward open by an enterprising diner. I remember that I rolled sideways through one of these window frames and fell onto the snow and was immediately aware that I should move aside to allow others to land as I had – and it was in that moment that my altruism was finally triggered.

I rose to my feet and began to assist those who had sustained cuts and bruises and broken bones, or who had been mildly crushed in the chaos. The blaze lit up the escaped diners with a light greater than any other that could be produced in the night, so that I was able to see clearly the dazed expressions of those near to me. Many people were coughing and some were crying, and all looked as though they had been struck by a blow to the head. A few men attempted heroes and tried to go back into the hotel to save those who remained behind, and I think one student did actually rescue an elderly woman who had succumbed to paralysis beside the buffet table; but generally there was no thought of reentering the burning building once one had escaped. Indeed, so great was the heat that we in the crowd had to move farther and farther across the street until we all stood in the college quadrangle, surrounded by bare oaks and elms and stately sycamores.

11. The passage describes
- (A) the heat and smoke that was generated by the sudden fire.
 - (B) the effect of the blast on unsuspecting hotel guests
 - (C) the loss of crockery, glass and bodies in the accident
 - (D) the layout of the college quadrangle, surrounded by bare oaks and elms and sycamores
12. The dazed expression on people's faces was caused by
- (A) the blow to their heads
 - (B) the heat generated by the blast
 - (C) the suddenness and extent of damage caused by the impact of the blast
 - (D) the impact of broken glass and crockery being hurled around in the confusion

13. The words in the passage that suggest there was a blast include
 (A) fire, heat, confusion, overturned and chaos
 (B) blazed, dazed, heroic, succumbed and paralysis
 (C) broken glass, cuts, bruises and sycamores
 (D) rescue, quadrangle, altruism, triggered and heat
14. 'The blaze lit up the escaped diners with a light greater than any other that could be produced in the night' can be paraphrased as
 (A) 'The fire set all the escaped diners ablaze.'
 (B) 'The light that set the escaped diners on fire was from a divine night fire.'
 (C) 'The night sky was lit by such brightness that one could see the blaze clearly.'
 (D) 'The fire burned in such a way that the writer could see the escaped diners clearly.'
15. The word altruism here means
 (A) 'the act of rolling across a window.'
 (B) 'a sudden movement triggered by a blast.'
 (C) 'selfless concern for the well being of others.'
 (D) 'the dazed feeling generated by an accident.'
